As the Proprietors would not presume, even to save themselves from utter Ruin, to offend either the Authority of the King, or of the Laws, they forbear all ideas of performing Operas, until the Hardship and Justice of their Case produce the proper Influence upon His Majesty's benevolent Mind; and, under the Circumstances in which they are now situated, with a Company of the most celebrated Singers and Dancers in the World, engaged at an Expence of 18,000l. they are confident in the Liberality of the Public, that they will Countenance and Support such an Entertainment, as they are warranted to give, until they shall recover their just Right of performing Operas, under his Majesty's Licence.
